

THREE STABBED IN A FIGHT OVER GAME OF CARDS

Victims in Hospital, One Dying, and Two Others Locked Up.

Salvatore Cuono, a laborer, thirty years old, of No. 342 East One Hundred and Seventh street, is dying in the Harlem Hospital to-day, and two other of his countrymen are occupying adjoining cots suffering from severe wounds, which, like the mortal injuries of Cuono, were received in a general stabbing affray following a quarrel over cards in the rooms of Pasquale Cuono, on the fifth floor of No. 272 First avenue, at 2 o'clock to-day.

Angelo Camberia and Juliano Domenico, both of No. 271 First avenue, are prisoners in the East One Hundred and Fourth street police station—blood-stained and surly. Knives with fresh blood on handles and blades were found in their possession after the stabbing.

Pasquale Cuono, the host at the card party, is being sought by the police. Giovanni Cuono, a brother of Pasquale, and Salvatore Marino are the other wounded men. Each is slashed on hands, face and chest.

The surgeons performed the desperate operation of laparotomy to save Salvatore Cuono's life. His intestines were protruding from a deep cut in the abdomen when he was taken to the hospital. He retained consciousness throughout, and suddenly declined with the other injured men to identify the two prisoners brought to his bedside.

Pasquale Cuono had invited the men to his rooms to play cards. At 1 o'clock the game was in progress, and all hands were inflamed from drinking "red ink." At 2 o'clock the general fight followed and when the police arrived the floor of the card-room was covered with blood and the three victims were in a heap.

BUYS PART OF THE PLAZA WITH TIPS

Hotel Doorman's Pickings Put $12,000 in Company's Bonds.

Thomas Clifford, doorman of the Hotel Plaza, holds $12,000 in bonds to-day of the hotel which employs him, and the money with which he acquired them has been received in tips from hotel guests and patrons since Oct. 1, 1907, when the big hostelry was opened.

Clifford, in glittering uniform, stands on the sidewalk in front of the hotel, opening carriage doors, summoning cabs and giving waiting vehicles the signal at the proper time. He bows and smiles and smiles and bows until the tip elusive is snared and tucked away in his pocket. It isn't a bit hard for Doorman Clifford to smile. He just can't help it.

"You must humor the public," says Clifford philosophically. "I have had many pleasant seconds with society folk. They are all right, if you know them, and it is my business to know them. I have heard wealthy folks talk of bonds, and I got the idea that our hotel bonds would be a pretty good investment. Anyway, I have sunk the twelve 'thous' in Plaza bonds."

For ten years Clifford was doorman at the Holland House, and became acquainted with a great many well-known persons. He has speculated in real estate and made money through tips other than the cash ones from his patrons.

Her Progress.

(From the Philadelphia Press.)

"The last time I saw you you were complaining about your servant being so slow."

"Oh! she's progressing now."

"Is she, really?"

"Yes, she's getting slower and slower."

Tomorrow---The ARROW SALE

Tomorrow—the seventh Arrow Sale will be ready. The story, in brief paragraphs, is this:

Every department in the store has contributed one or more items—140 offerings of fresh, seasonable merchandise—to make tomorrow a day of June price-savings you will long remember.

The goods are remarkably-priced—about one-third and in some instances even one-half less than the regular selling prices. Green cards displayed throughout the store tell the story in figures. The Arrow on the cards points straight at the goods on sale. Act quickly—because some of the quantities are not large enough to last through the day.

The little book which will be handed you as you enter the store tells you about the goods, tells you in what part of the store they are selling, tells you the regular selling prices and the Arrow Sale prices.

Whatever Summer needs you may have, be assured the goods you want are here tomorrow, at "away-down-below-regular" prices. We cannot promise to fill mail orders on these goods. Here are some of the 140 items:
